[CNE26] Nimmerdor 2

On the west side of Amersfoort lies a unique green space: the Forest of Nimmerdor. Anyone walking, cycling, or searching for a geocache here today might not immediately realize that this forest has a relatively recent history. Yet, Nimmerdor tells an important story about nature, urban expansion, and recreation.

 From heathland to forest

The Forest of Nimmerdor was created in the twentieth century, at a time when Amersfoort was growing rapidly. Where once there was mainly heathland and open landscape, the decision was made to create a forest here as part of a green buffer around the city. The name Nimmerdor refers to the old estate that once stood there and evokes the image of a place "where one never wants to leave."

 Origin and Development:

The forest was planted systematically, with straight avenues, winding paths, and a variety of tree species. Over the years, the area gradually took on a more natural character. What began as a landscaped forest has grown into a diverse nature reserve where birds, small mammals, and insects find their home. Nearby ponds and clearings provide variety and tranquility.

 Current use

Nowadays, the Bos van Nimmerdor is a popular recreation area for Amersfoort residents. Hikers, runners, dog owners, and nature lovers all know where to find this forest. At the same time, it is a place where silence and nature still have space. It is precisely this combination that makes Nimmerdor so suitable for a geocache: discovering, searching, and enjoying the environment go hand in hand here.

 For the geocacher:

While searching for this cache, take a moment to look around you. The paths, trees, and clearings together tell the story of a forest that was deliberately created, but has since become an indispensable and vibrant part of Amersfoort.

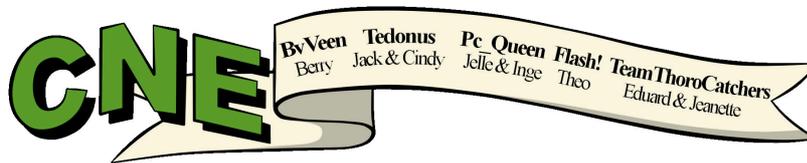

Have fun searching and enjoy the Forest of Nimmerdor!
