[CNE26] Amersfoort in Detail

Amersfoort is a well-known city in the province of Utrecht. It was first mentioned in 1028, when it was still called Amersfoide. But people lived here much earlier. Remains of hunting camps dating back to 9,500 BC have been discovered. This was during the hunter-gatherer era.

On June 12, 1259, Amersfoort received city rights from the Bishop of Utrecht. Towards the end of the thirteenth century, the first stone city wall was built. It was 1,550 meters long and surrounded by a moat.

Unfortunately, very little of the wall remains. The Kamperbinnenpoort gate remains, along with the foundations on which the Muurhuizen stand. Only the moat is still present and clearly visible. Around 1380, the second city wall was built, which took seventy years. This wall is 2,850 meters long and also surrounded by a moat. Much more of this wall remains. Besides the canal, you'll also find the Koppelpoort and the Monikkendam. The historic city center, with its medieval character, is protected under the National Heritage

Act of Amersfoort.

This multi-day trail primarily runs through this part of the city. The old, as well as new, buildings are richly detailed. Walk from waypoint to waypoint and check which photo was taken at each point. Along the way, enjoy the many other details the city has to offer. Once you've found all the photos, you'll know where the cache is hidden. Enjoy your walk and browsing!
