[CNE26] View of the Iron Weighbridge

Welcome to a unique piece of hidden history on the south side of Amersfoort. In front of the entrance to the coach house on the former Nimmerdor estate lies a rare relic from the early 20th century: an original iron weighbridge.

Where cyclists and walkers now pass daily, carriages, wagons, and their loads were once meticulously weighed. The Nimmerdor Estate, founded in the 17th century by Everard Meyster (famous for the Amersfoort Boulder), was a bustling estate in its day, where logistics and status went hand in hand.

The Weighbridge: British technology in Amersfoort

If you look closely at the road surface in front of the coach house (Arnhemseweg-Zuid 213), you can still clearly see the cast-iron plates of the weighbridge. If you push aside the leaves or sand a bit, you can discover the origins of this mechanism.

The bridge was manufactured around 1900 by Samuel Denison & Son from Leeds, England. The inscription on the plates is still legible, including the serial number 5186. Samuel Denison was a world-renowned manufacturer of weighing equipment; the fact that such a specimen ended up here in Amersfoort testifies to the quality that was desired for the estate at the time.

Monumental status

Both the coach house and the weighbridge are part of the national heritage complex of Nimmerdor. The weighbridge is one of the few remaining examples in the Netherlands that can still be admired in its original location in a public space (or directly adjacent to it). The mechanism beneath the plates is no longer operational, but it reminds us of a time when every load of grain or wood on the estate had to be precisely recorded.

From Cache

Let bij het zoeken naar de cache goed op je omgeving. Je bevindt je nabij een monumentaal pand; respecteer de privacy van de bewoners en de integriteit van het monument.

Op locatie N 52° 08.225' E 5° 23.754' verzamel je de volgende gegevens:

A = Het laatste cijfer van het serienummer op de ijzeren plaat van de firma Samuel Denison & Son? (lees listing)

B = Het aantal letters in de naam van de stad waar deze weegbrug gefabriceerd is? (lees listing)

C = Het aantal houten reflectorpaaltjes langs de beide zijden van de oprit?

D = Het aantal verticale spijlen in het hekwerk van de ingang?

Maak daarna de volgende berekening:

$$X=(D/2)-A-B$$

$$Y=(Cx2)-(A+B+1)$$

Eindlocatie:

N 52° 08.(225 + X)'
E 005° 23.(754 + Y)'

Graag willen wij je vragen om goed te letten op de borden, o.a. de volgende regels zijn van belang:
