[CNE26] Birds of prey of the Netherlands

Since 2013, a pair of peregrine falcons has made the Onze Lieve Vrouwentoren (Our Lady's Tower) in the heart of Amersfoort their home. This is an exception, as peregrine falcons are quite rare and are almost never spotted in urban areas. Except for this one, they can regularly be seen on the tower, especially on the cross just below the rooster. Since 2013, a nest box has been placed on the second gallery of the tower, which has already been well-used the following year. Several eggs are laid each year, many of which have hatched. In ten years, almost 40 falcons have hatched.

Besides peregrine falcons, there are other birds of prey in the Netherlands. This puzzle highlights seven of them. Identify the birds of prey and find their Dutch names. Stack the word value and use it in the formula. We hope you enjoy the puzzle and the search! If you have photos of birds of prey, they would be greatly appreciated if you would add them to the log.
